The GOFAR project is a transnational collaboration aimed at addressing the challenges faced by refugees and the individuals working with them. With the increasing number of people forced to flee their countries due to conflicts and persecution, there is a pressing need to provide effective support and integration opportunities. The project focuses on training volunteers, trainers, educators, and other professionals involved in refugee work to enhance their practices and ensure better outcomes for refugees.

- By achieving these objectives, the project aims to fill the support gap and empower workers involved in the migration area. The project targets social inclusion, exchange of good practices, and the reduction of inequalities by combating racism, segregation, and other forms of discrimination.

The GOFAR project is motivated by the need for a robust response to the refugee crisis and the cultivation of acceptance and tolerance in European society. It addresses the needs and goals of participating organizations by providing support to staff members, enhancing inclusivity training, and enriching curriculum and methodology related to refugee training. Cooperating with transnational partners allows for the exchange of perspectives, enhancement of intercultural skills, and the dissemination of project results and the need for similar projects across the EU. Participating in the project improves language and communication abilities and enhances employability and mobility for educators and staff members. In summary, the GOFAR project is a comprehensive initiative that aims to empower workers, support refugees, foster inclusivity, and contribute to a collective effort in supporting refugees across Europe.
